Adaptation: A change in structure, function, or behavior by which a species or individual improves its chance of survival in a specific environment.